

Finance Project Experience

Hewshott were appointed to consult on a difficult and fastpaced project in the Marina Bay Financial Centre building. The difficulty was mainly due to the office being occupied throughout the duration of the project.

Due to an increase in personnel and the lack of appropriate meeting spaces with video conferencing functionality, the client decided to construct the facility in the limited space that was at hand. This was a challenging task as the only possible location was right next to a server room housing noisy equipment.

Additionally fan-coil units used for the server room were located right above the future meeting room, which could not be relocated.

Hewshott's main task was to provide protection against noise emissions, to ensure background noise level criteria were met. However, equally important was to guarantee a high level of privacy between the meeting room and adjacent workstations and to adapt the internal acoustics of the room to support video conferencing functionality.

Our independent consultants were able to deliver a solution that was both practical and met the vision of the client.

Upon completion of the project, Hewshott carried out testing to confirm the acoustical goals has been achieved.
