

AV

Professional Services Project Experience

A leading professional services company engaged Hewshott to provide the full portfolio of needs analysis, scheme design, detailed design, and procurement services for a new office in Glasgow.

A full review of their existing room standards and technology choices was completed to ensure they were still providing class leading services to their internal users. The technologies reviewed included wireless presentation, control, and Skype for Business tools.

Testing of these systems took place in our dedicated tech lab space, giving our client the confidence that the fit-for-purpose solution would work first time, every time.

Our manufacturer relationships combined with our test lab environment, enabled us to quickly set up real world comparative tests, vastly improving the assessment and the decision-making process.

The equipment identified throughout this process went on to form the basis of design for another Glasgow project.

This simplified the process, shortened the timeline, and significantly reduced the risk when using new systems and hardware for the client team responsible for project delivery.

