

AV

Tech Project Experience

The Client wanted their Singapore office to be a space to cultivate culture and identity while also accelerating communication and collaboration, not only within employees but also with customers and partners.

As AV consultants on the project, Hewshott had to act as a central point that was in charge of coordinating between remotely-based programmers and content developers and on-site project personnel to ensure project delivery on time and in budget.

Remote collaboration was high on the clients priority list; Hewshott added flexibility to the mix to deliver spaces that could offer compelling, strategic, collaborative and highly effective experiences - all remotely.

It can sometimes be difficult for the company to demonstrate how emerging technology can solve their clients' real-world problems. To that end, Hewshott designed an exclusive space for them to hold client events and showcase their latest offerings. This space was both touch and non-touch interactive technologies incorporated for a powerful and immersive experience.

Hewshott has since been engaged by the same client on a number of subsequent projects in Australia, Japan, India and China.

